In emotional parts the han deeps veloped especial strength and the play in which she now appears was carefully written with reference to her admirable powers in this disection. Like many other popular plays of the day, the plot is a simple one, its chief attraction depending upon the truthfolmess with which the various characters are depicted. An immense crowd is copying the matter this afternoon, and many will be there this evening. Jertha Welby is all that the most greater admired the afternoon and many will be the the this evening. most swell and elegant in the city.

A DEMOUTPUL SUPPISE party took place last evening at Franzbeim's Hall that was attended by about one hundred and lifty persons. It was complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Albinger, who it will be remembered were recently married. The party was gotten up by Misses Mary Albinger, Therens Giue and Maggie Flannigran, and they are to be complimented on the success of the same. Mr. Albinger, who was suffering from aslight indisposition, was unable to be present. Mayer's orchestra furnished the dancing music. About midnight refreshments were served after which dancing was resumed.

The performance at the Opera House last night of "Porg's Forry." by Miss Minnue Maddern and Havlin & White's dramatic company, was a very creditable one, and it was to be regretted that the andlence was only fair in size. Miss Mindern is a fine actress, a pleasing singer, and a very attractive little lady on the stage. Her support was even and satisfaptory, and the drama quite up to the average of recent productions of its class. All these conditions could not have failed to result in an enjoyable entertainment. There is just enough of the mysterious in the play to make it interesting, enough of the comia to relieve the monotony, and an occasional trilling scene to give it an edge. The torpedo and steamboat scene is a brilliant conception brilliantly carried out. Had Miss Maddern played in the city two nights instead of one her second audience would have crowded the house, and should she again visit us she may rest assured of a warm welcome and an oppreciation more in keeping with her merits.
